

WHITE CAPS VISITED BY TONOPAH HOLDERS

By Wm. McClure Gotwaldt

There is every indication that the White Caps ore bodies will go to great depths, not less than 1000 and possibly 2000 feet. The writer bases this opinion on the fact that the dip of the alaskite, which is the underlying formation of Manhattan, doubtless precluding any deposit of values to great distance, carries it under the Caps at about the depth stated. This late intrusion of igneous rock provided solutions that enriched the lime. In the White Caps the deposition is undoubtedly primary; in other words, it is the product of ascending solutions, coming from the alaskite.

When the intrusion came it uplifted Devonian limes, Nevada's oldest rock formation, upon its crest. In the White Caps, which was viewed yesterday by three auto parties who are interested in the property, a wonderful change was witnessed from the physical conditions prevailing only a few weeks previous. On the surface and to the second level the hanging wall of the ledge was a lime shale and the foot a dolomite. On the third, or 312 level, the lime has changed to hanging walls of lime and foot walls consisting of shale. This is in itself indicative of permanency. Furthermore, the vein is gouged with several inches of pure tale. The gangue matter is not quartz but calc spar, showing a change by solution and re-deposition in ancient times. This spar in itself is a poor bearer of values, worth probably $2.50 to $3.80 a ton in gold on the general average, but the gold is found chiefly in the pyrite, arsenical pyrite and stibnite, as well as the "isabella yellow," which showed in the level above.

Three are now three ore bodies exposed. One is 260 feet easterly from the shaft. It is twelve feet in width and the total breakdown averages $29.20 a ton, practically all in gold, for the base metals are not considered, they being lost in the treatment process. This is the east ore shoot. Some thirty feet before it was encountered the crosscut tapped another ore body on which a raise has been sent up. It is from five to seven feet in width and the values range from $18 to $24. Two hundred feet west of the shaft another ore body has been found, one that was incorrectly termed the west shoot. It is now demonstrated beyond cavil that this is the shaft ore body. It is the full width of the drift that was turned from the crosscut and at one place shots were put into the footwall side and it was found that the total width of the body is nearly ten feet. Ore values are higher than in the east shoot, one general day's average being $128, but the general average is about $40. This shoot, as well as the east shoot, had been penetrated up to yesterday for a distance of 37 feet. The west ore body is now believed to be about 125 feet ahead of the face. This was the richest of all on the 212 level.

Exhaustive tests have been made of the ore and it is expected that the treatment cost can be brought down to close to $3.50. The saving is excellent, it averaging 91.6 per cent. The process is absolutely new and it will be given out after the mill is in successful operation. It embraces crushing, roasting and cyaniding. The mill will be in operation about the first of the year and the daily tonnage treated will be as soon as possible brought up to 125 tons.

DEATH OF OLE OLSEN PIONEER AUSTIN MINER

Ole Olsen, the last survivor of the early day hard rock miners in this camp, died last Tuesday evening after a very brief illness. Rugged and strong to the last he was doing his regular shift in the Austin-Dakota mine when bronchial trouble required him to ask for a layoff. He was his same sturdy self up to two minutes before he passed away.

At his bedside were his devoted wife, a son, Albert, and his wife, who arrived Tuesday morning by auto from Tonopah. Mrs. Lena Christensen, of Utah, did not reach Austin until Wednesday afternoon.

His funeral was held from the Olsen home in Upper Austin, Thursday afternoon, under the auspices of Toiyabe lodge, No. 9, K. of P., and was largely attended.—Reese River Revue.

IRISHMEN BARRED FROM ENGLISH HARVEST WORK

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, August 28.—Hundreds of Irishmen, young and old, are walking the streets of many English towns because they have been refused employment on harvest work, in quest of which they crossed the Irish sea. The English laborers have barred the Irish and the English farmers refuse places to them for fear of getting into difficulties with the native labor.

The whole trouble is said to be due to the fact that while English labor in the army is in Ireland receiving one shilling a day as government pay, the Irish laborers—excluded from provisions of the military service act—take their places in England at six and seven shillings a day.

In Lincolnshire and other important farming counties on the east coast the situation is said to have grown serious. There is no denying that labor is needed to harvest the crops, but the farmers are unable to employ the Irish. They have been told that a rupture will result which will leave them without any labor at all. The difficulty is said to be increased by the shopkeepers in the villages who decline to sell them food.

PRECIOUS STONES FOUND BY JESSE L. WORKMAN IN ELKO

Jesse L. Workman is back from his Divide property in Elko county. Recently he closed a deal with the Berrys of San Francisco on his Divide holdings. The Berrys are installing machinery to facilitate the work.

Mr. Workman in the meantime is prospecting for precious stones. He is finding some and exhibits specimens possessing the hue and color that makes them beautiful. Workman declares he will find a deposit of diamonds yet in Nevada before he quits. His present search is for the high priced diamond.—Humboldt Star.

POTASH DISCOVERY MADE IN WHITE PINE COUNTY

A considerable body of rock bearing potash salts was recently found in Big Wash canyon, in the southeastern corner of White Pine county, by Henry Osborn and associates. A number of tests have been made which give the general average of four per cent potash. During the past week Mr. Osborn bonded his property to San Diego capital.—Ely Record.
